

George Dickerman, of England, is the first name we have. We do not know the name of his wife, the size of his family, or the place of his abode. All we know is that he had a son, Thomas, who married in England, and came to America with Ellen, his wife, and his sons, Thomas 1623-1690 and Abram, 1634-1711. Two sons were born in America, Isaac, 1637-1726 and John, 1744-?, who died young. An Isaac 'Dickman', -1755, may have been a son of Isaac, but his identity is not yet clear. Thomas Dickerman is reputed to have come to Dorchester, a suburb of Boston, in the good ship James, with a group of colonists who had the Rev. Richard Mather, grandfather of the ~~Rev. Cotton Mather~~, as their spiritual leader. They replaced a group of Dorchester colonists who went on, with their pastors, to the New Haven Colony. Thomas owned a home and small farm near what is now Upham's Corners in Dorchester and a tailor shop just south of Boston Common. I have visited the site of the homestead, near the present intersection of Dudley Street and Brook Avenue. It is now a business section. The tailor shop was located near the present intersections of Summer Street and Bedford Street, just a few blocks from the Statler Hotel. Thomas Dickerman was enrolled as a member of First Congregational Parish in Dorchester on June 6th, 1636. He served in various capacities in his home town and left a Christian will at his death. He probably is buried, with the early ministers and members of his Church, in the Dorchester North Cemetery at 595 Columbia Road Upham's Corners, but that remains to be verified. His widow, Ellen, married John Bullard of Meadfield in 1659 and the Church records tells of the transfer of her Church membership. This Church stood on what is now called Meeting House Hill, overlooking the meadows where Thomas Dickerman had grazing rights, and the old bay. The sixth building now stands on the same site. Much can be found as to Thomas Dickerman from its records and from the Suffolk Deeds.

The second son of Thomas Dickerman, Abram, 1634-1711, is next in our line. While his eleven-year old brother, Thomas, was able to do much upon the arrival of the family in Dorchester, Abraham probably was carried ashore that memorable day, August 17, 1635. He grew up in Dorchester and First Parish. And when Mary Cooper, of the New Haven Colony, came for a visit to Dorchester he met his fate and found his bride. She was the daughter of a well-to-do founder of the New Haven Colony and an early resident in New Haven. They were married in 1658-59 and made New Haven their home. Ere long, Abram was following in the political footsteps of John Cooper, his father-in-law, and he too served many terms in the General Assembly of the Connecticut Colony. He bought the home on what is now New Haven Green, corner of Elm and Church streets, and lived there for many years. He was made a Lieutenant in a local Company of militia, served on a committee to secure a charter for New Haven, helped to lay out the town of Wallingford, and led in a movement to enlarge and improve the First Congregational Church. For fiftythree years he served in New Haven and when he died at the age of 77 his body was buried near the Church, back of what is now the Center Church, on New Haven Green. The spot is no longer marked for the stones were removed nearly a century ago. I found the original stone, with that of Mary his wife, along the wall of the Grove Street Cemetery nearby. Someone may find the ~~first~~ plat of the old cemetery some day and locate the approximate location of the graves. Abram's children were as follows: Mary Dickerman-Bassett; Sarah Dickerman-Sperry; Hannah Dickerman-Chidsey; Ruth Dickerman-Bradley; Abigail Dickerman-Sperry; Abraham; Isaac; and Rebecca Dickerman-Feote. Our line comes down through Isaac, 1677-1758, who married Mary Atwater. Thus began the Dickerman residence in New Haven and its environs and the remarkable contributions to the public welfare of that city, contributions which continue through living Dickermans there to this very day.

Isaac Dickerman, 1677-1758, was one of the most notable men of our family. Born in New Haven, to that city he gave his life and service, and has left many tokens of the esteem in which he was held. He became a Captain in the local militia; served more terms in the General Assembly than any man in Connecticut; helped to secure Yale University from Saybrook for New Haven; gave two of the forty acres given for its beginnings, served on repair and improvement committees for the college; served as Deacon of First Church, now Center Church on The Green, for twentyseven years; presided many times as moderator in the Noyes Controversy in his Church; and later served as deacon of the White Haven Church, now represented in the United Church on The Green, and set an example of patience, statesmanship and Christian living which is highly admirable. It was not until the Noyes Controversy had dragged on for years, and President Clap and the faculty and students had withdrawn from First Church to hold their own services in the Chapel, that Deacon Isaac Dickerman tired of the bickering and withdrew to another Church, to try to find a bit of peace in his last years. He was immediately made a deacon, and he gave a silver communion cup to the Church as a token of his love and affection. That cup, now almost 200 years old, is now in the possession of The United Church on The Green and is still used on the Communion Table as the symbolic cup. I have held this historic cup in my hands and looked upon it with mingled emotions! His dust, and that of his wife, Mary, lies back of the present Center Church on The Green. He was again married, after his first wife's death in 1753, to Elizabeth Walling. There were no children from this second marriage. The stones of all three were reported in 1922 as having been found 'in a house in Wall Street' but must have been left there and now no one knows where they are. They should be located and placed beside other Dickerman stones along the wall in the Grove Street Cemetery. The children of Isaac Dickerman were; Ruth Dickerman-Hall; Samuel Dickerman; Jonathan Dickerman; Stephen Dickerman; Mary Dickerman-White; Rebecca Dickerman-Hubbard and Abigail Dickerman-Gorham. Here our line parts company with many of the present good families of New Haven Dickermans! Samuel, founder of Mt. Carmel, was our progenitor and we now follow on down through his line.

Samuel Dickerman, 1716-1760, married Mary Alling, daughter of Jonathan Alling who appears to have been the political and ecclesiastical opponent of his father Isaac. Another proof that 'love will find a way' even in controversy! He was one of the founders of Mt. Carmel, north of New Haven and east of Wallingford. The family is scattering. His sister Ruth, marries Eliakim Hall and her grandchildren go to Wallingford, Vermont. His own grandchildren, Simeon, Amasa, Lyman and Isaac are likewise settling around Rutland and Mt. Holly, Vermont. But here he lives and dies in peace, leaving behind the priceless heritage of a good name. The stones of himself and his wife are found in the Mt. Carmel Cemetery. His children were: Isaac Dickerman; Sarah Dickerman-Munson; Mary Dickerman-Castle; Samuel Dickerman II; James Dickerman; Rhoda Dickerman-Atwater; Chauncey; Jesse; Ruth Dickerman-Atwater; Susanna Dickerman-Chatterton; and Lucy Dickerman-Tuttle. Again we leave some splendid Dickerman families as our line comes down through Isaac Dickerman, the oldest son.

Isaac Dickerman, 1740-1801, married Sibyl Sperry of nearby Wallingford. During the Revolutionary War he served as Second Lieut. of Third Company, Fifth Battalion, of General Wadsworth's Brigade. He, too, lived and died in Mt. Carmel. I found his stone, and that of his wife, in the Mt. Carmel Cemetery. Old Glory waves above his dust. It was his four sons who went to Mt. Holly, Vt. It was he who remarked: 'What three of his sons capitulated to the Button sisters there, on the occasion of the third ones surrender, that he 'thought he had Buttons enough, but now he must have another Button!' His children were: Simeon; Isaac; Amasa; Lyman; Isaac II; Allen; Sibyl Dickerman; Blakeslee; Our line comes down through Lyman Dickerman, who surrendered to Abigail Button, of Mt. Holly, Vt.

Lyman Dickerman, 1774-1826, married Abigail Búttón, as previously stated, after he and his brothers Amasa and Isaac ll had followed their older brother, Simeon, to Mt. Holly, Vermont. Here, in the lovely, rolling hills of the Green Mountains, the Dickermans laid the foundations of large families. Lyman was killed by being thrown from his carriage in 1826 and his stone and that of his wife are to be found in the Packer Cemetery, at Bowlville, near Mt. Holly, Vermont. I discovered thá Dickerman burial place after much search. There are Dickermans buried at nearby Mt. Holly, Belmont, Cuttingsville, East Wallingford, and probably at many other places. But Lyman and Abigail, miriam and Sally, first and second wives of Simeon; Amasa and Hannah, and many other Dickermans are buried in the lovely Packer cemetery far from the madding crowds. Descendants of these brothers are still to be found in this territory and around Rutland and Pittsford and elsewhere. The children of Lyman Dickerman were: Isaac; Austin, who married Martha Buckmaster and is represented today in Austin W. Dickorman of Pittsford Vermont; (*) in David and Morris Holden and in Elroy and Minnie Kimberly of the same locality. The oldest is Morris Dickerman, who at the ripe age of 85 still works every day at the Howe Scale Works in Rutland. He lives with a foster son in North Clarendon, nearby. From Lyman's brother Allen, who remained in Mt. Carmel come Florence Cook-MacGregor of 104 Carmel St., Hamden Conn., and Helen Cook-Root of 2951 Whitney Ave., Mt. Carmel, Conn. Our own line comes down through Nelson Dickerman.

Nelson Dickerman, 1806-1887, married Hannah Vaughn, reputed to have been a Philadelphia school teacher who visited in Vermont and whom he prevailed upon to become his bride. They lived first in East Wallingford, then in Ashtabula Co., Ohio and then entered land at Greenfield, Ill., in 1836. In that fertile farming land they did well and reared their family. While on a visit back in Vermont in the summer of 1873 she was suddenly stricken and died. The record on the Dickerman stone in the Million Cemetery relates that she was buried at Willsboro, N.Y. I searched three cemeteries there but could find no marker. Perhaps some one will do better than I and will find the stone there. Nelson did not remarry but lived with his daughter, Amanda Louisa Dickerman-Zink, until his death. His children were: Warren, who died young; Lyman, who never married; Sarah Olivia-Collins, whose grand daughter; Carrie Piper-Cooper, lives at 1238 Rhode Island St., Lawrence, Kansas. She has numerous desendants nearby. Major Warron Dickerman, whose daughter Mrs. Lena Morris, lives in St. Louis, Mo.; Austin Thomas Dickerman, whose grandson by his first marriage, Harry Elmer Dickerman lives at 5252 17 N.E., Seattle, 5, Wash. And whose children by a second marriage are Mrs. Julia Amanda Gotz, of 8211 Highland, Ave. Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Lily L. Cretors, 459 Vine St. Glendale, Cal.; Daisy H. Dickerman, a retired school teacher, 332 Barnard St., Asheville; N.C.; and Mary May Dickerman-Burdick, deceased has two daughters, Mrs. Helen Burdick-Hammon, Orlando, Florida, R.F.D. #, Box 505-A and Mrs. Agnes Burdick-State, Gun Barrel Road, Baldwinsville, N.Y. and a son, George Burdick, Munson, Florida. There are numerous descendants in these families. The youngest daughter of Nelson Dickerman was Amanda Luisa. She married Robinson Crusoe Zink and our line comes down through them.

Amanda Louisa Dickerman, 1839-1896, while visiting relatives, met a young Ohio school teacher who was then located at Montezuma, Ill., and married him. His people had come to Buford and Hillsboro, Ohio, from Bedford, Penna. They set up housekeeping in the Barr Store vicinity and upon the mother's death, moved into the Nelson Dickerman Homestead near Greenfield, Ill. They later bought the Sheffield Farm nearby and there is the scene of my earliest recollections of them. R.C. Zink was a busy man. He was a good farmer, and had the first set of silos I ever saw. He had a large dairy herd and a brewery in Greenfield.

(*) Also his brother Ed. D. Dickerman of Crown Point, Indiana, and a sister Mrs. Leroy Schaefer, 379 S. Main St. Lewistown, Pa. Their mother, Mrs. Edward Warren Dickerman, a very lovely lady, lives with her daughter.

a large dairy herd and operated a creamery at Greenfield. He had time to be County Treasurer, carry on a Sunday School in his own Church, the Pleasant Hill Baptist Church, and to superintend a mission Sunday School in the afternoon in the Buzzards Roost schoolhouse. Not one of his children ever touched liquor or used tobacco in any form. The following children came to bless their home: William Nelson Zink, 1865-1915, whose unmarried daughter, Alta, and her sister, Pearl Helen Zink-Michel, live at 509 Franklin St., Greenville, with first and second generations; John Bell Zink, 1871- , whose widow lives at 815 N. Elm Street, Greenville, Ill. Her two daughters and grandchildren live nearby. R. D. Zink, deceased at Roswell N. M. in 1949, whose son, Herman, has a son, Harold, and a grandson, Ronnie Harold at Roswell, N. M. and a son, Vernon, and a daughter Lenora at Tyron, Okla. R. I., as well as a daughter Jowell Zink-Reedy who, with her family, now live at Chandler, Okla. R. I.; Hannah Zink-Carson, Box 490, Roswell, N. M., whose son Herman Robinson Carson lives at 1011 West Gilbert St., Muncie, Indiana with his sons and grandchildren nearby, and whose daughter, Florence Amanda Carson-Kelley, lives at 2029 Pepper St., Burbank, Cal., with her children and grandchildren nearby; Anna Zink-Ragland, of Beaver Creek Ill., with three generations of descendants; and Eli Austin Zink, of Grover, Colo., whose children and grandchildren live nearby.

This brings this brief synopsis of our particular line down to living descendants. To give the following generations would require more space than we can now give. There have been some omissions and no doubt there have been some errors. We regret that we can not give allied lines but that would require another book! We will appreciate hearing from any interested descendants of the Dickerman Family. Inasmuch as we are to be found all over the United States we might well try to get acquainted with those living nearby. Perhaps some one in the New England States, someone in Connecticut, some one in Vermont, some one in Ohio and Penna., someone in Illinois, some one in the Southland, some one in the Plains States, and some one in the Pacific States might get a section of the family together for a Family Reunion. And some one might arrange for a national meeting of the Dickermans on Meeting House Hill in Boston to celebrate the coming of Thomas and Ellen Dickerman to America in 1635. We may well be proud of our heritage and each of us should strive to add honor to the name of Dickerman!

There are many Dickermans about New Haven. I have twice visited that city and have met many of the family. Among them is Miss Carolyn Gorham Dickerman, spry keeper of the Jonathan Dickerman Red House museum and perhaps the most widely acquainted of the family; Mr. and Mrs. Bonnet Japer Dickerman, with whom Miss Carolyn stays and whose son, Murlyn of Missoula, Mont., I missed both times; Fremont E. Dickerman, the hardware merchant and his family; the MacGregors; the Roots and their family; Miss Elizabeth Street Dickerman, daughter of the publisher, with whom we spent a delightful evening; and perhaps others I do not now recall. I regret that I missed Howard W. Dickerman, merchant, recently elected District Governor of Rotary International, the three Wallingford brothers, Harry, Morgan and Winslow Dickerman, and others. Perhaps we may yet meet! The New Haven Green, the Center and United Churches on the Green; the Grove Street Cemetery; Whitneyville, Hamdon, Mt. Carmel and Wallingford, all are places the visiting Dickerman should not miss. The Deacon Isaac Dickerman Communion Cup, in the United Church, is our most tangible link with the past and thrills the beholder with its silvery, shimmering beams!

I missed Miriam Dickerman, on my visit to the Museum at Old Mystic. And I failed to get in touch with any Norwichtown Dickermans.

Meeting House Hill, in Dorchester of East Boston, is a most interesting place. The sixth Church building now stands on the same site. It is a lovely New England Meetinghouse, first Congregational and now Unitarian. From this vantage point one can look out over the salt meadows to the old anchoring place in the bay. To the southwest is the site of Thomas Dickerman's home. His tailor shop was downtown. Due to the devious and winding streets of Dorchester I would advise anyone to take a taxi to insure arrival at his destination! I was unable to find any Dickermans, although I did not go out to Stoughton or any nearby cities where the Dickermans migrated. I did not get to see the Dickerman records or signatures in the First Parish Church Records or in the Suffolk Doods. Neither did I get to find the grave of Thomas Dickerman which may be in the Dorchester North Cemetery at Upham's Corners. There is still much to do in Boston.

It was a pleasure to meet the Vermont Dickermans. I was out to Austin W. Dickerman's home, near Pittsford, and met his wife and family and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ed D. Dickerman of Crown Point, Indiana, and his mother, Mrs. Edward Warren Dickerman of Lewistown, Penna. I took pictures of the Ft. Vengeance Monument on his farm. I also visited at the farm home of David Holden and visited Morris Holden in Pittsford. I also visited the sawyer, Elroy Kimberly up near Brandon. Perhaps my greatest thrill came when we called 85 year Old Morris Dickerman out of the Howe Scale Co. at Rutland and found him to be worthy of the best traditions of our family. I did not have time to search out the Buttons, the Chattertons, the Halls, the Buckmasters, the Johnsons, the Ketchams, the Huntleys and others who are of our family.

One of my most pleasant experiences in the past summer was to meet the Ohio Dickermans for the first time. It came about when I located Fred M. Dickerman, 33 Johnson Ave. Indianapolis, Indiana. He has been an insurance agent, state Representative and active Christian worker in our capital city. I met him, his sister Ethel Budd-Dickerman, school teacher in N. Lewisburg, Ohio, and Lurie Jaynes-Scott, her son and grandchildren and other Dickerman descendants at Old Berlin and Cheshire, Delaware, Ohio, R. 4. Her line runs: Thomas, Abram, Isaac, Jonathan, Enos, Bononi and Elizabeth Alma Dickerman-Jaynes. Frederick M. Dickerman's line runs down through Benoni (6), Benoni (7), and Sterling Truman (8). Old Constantia, is now Cheshire, Ohio. A daughter of Ethel Dickerman-Budd is Kathryn Budd-Chenoweth, 6020 Gladdon Drive, Indianapolis, Ind. There I also met Mrs. Ella Davis-Weber, daughter of Harriet Alma Dickerman-Davis and cousin of Frederick M. Dickerman. She lives in nearby Galena, O. Her son, Kenneth Davis Weber lives at 36 Lincoln Ave., Niles, O. His son, John William Weber, went abroad with Yale University's basket ball team in the summer of 1950 and he will probably play on Yale's Varsity 1950-51.

Everywhere I have found the Dickermans to be substantial, honest, hospitable and forward-looking people who carry their full share of civic responsibilities and who lean strongly to business and the professions. I hope I may be privileged to meet many more of them. In the event that we go South after the holidays, I hope to meet Mrs. Elizabeth Perkinson of Sweetwater, Tenn.; Mrs. Helen Hammon, Orlando, Fla. R. 3 and her uncle, George Burdick, of Munson, Fla.; the Tuttles of Daytona Beach, Fla.; Donald Horace Dickerman of Miami, and others.

A DICKERMAN DIRECTORY FOR 1950.

(This Directory listing is grouped geographically, regardless of family relationships, with the hope that relatives in each section may become acquainted with each other. So far as possible, full names, full mailing addresses, the year of birth, and the page in the Dickerman Genealogy on which each person's line is represented, are given. The list is inaccurate and incomplete, no doubt, but every effort has been made to get full information. Upon receipt of this Directory many will be encouraged to complete information lacking, correct statements, and give further information as to other Dickerman Descendants. We have endeavored to list only the heads of Dickerman Families or Dickerman Descendants now living)

Indentation is used to show children in families. Comparison of page numbers will indicate nearness of relationship.

Despite likelihood of many errors and an incomplete list, I felt that I should not delay longer in getting out this Directory. You can help by sending me corrections and additions at once. Give full information.

No doubt you will discover relatives living near you of whom you have never known. It would be a fine idea to arrange for group and sectional get-togethers. Perhaps some day we may have a National Reunion.

And now, wishing you the Seasons Greetings, I send forth this Dickerman Family Directory with the hope that it may be both pleasurable and profitable for all who receive it.

H.R. Carson, D.D.
